

Daily Reflection Wednesday 13th May

Today in our assembly with Rev Sian we continued to use the image and structure of the labyrinth to help us think about being thankful.

We looked closely at a common wild flower that you can see in Cornwall at this time of year.

Do you know what this is?

As we sat in the sunshine on the playground in a big circle, observing physical distancing we imagined walking round the labyrinth thinking about the flower we had in our hands. We thought about the smell, the stem, the shape of the stem, the colour of the flowers, the number of flowers in a cluster, the size of each individual flower and the surprise of the pollen inside.

Dear God,

Thank you for flowers that we are starting to see emerge now that May is here.
Thank you for the surprise of the pollen inside and for providing food for bees who sustain our life on this precious planet.

AMEN

CHALLENGE

What flowers can you see when you are out today? Can you name them? Remember to check with an adult they are safe to touch and examine them closely. What is a person who studies plants called?
